

IS IT AN EMERGENCY?

- When should I go to my primary care doctor?
- When should I go to an urgent care center?
- When should I go to the emergency room?

Andrew is a healthy college athlete. On Thursday, he felt tired, achy and had nasal congestion. Friday afternoon, he developed a fever and sore throat. He wants to go to his primary care doctor the office is now closed. He calls the Nurse Advice Line for guidance, the nurse tells him to go to an Urgent Care Center to receive medical care treatment because it looks like he has strep throat and it can be contagious for his roommates. Andrew receives medication treatment for strep throat and the doctor at the Urgent Care Center tells him to follow up with his regular doctor on Monday to make sure he is doing better.

When should I go to my PRIMARY CARE DOCTOR?

If you are sick, but it is not life threatening, you should call your doctor and ask for an appointment. For example, you might have a:

- Bad cough
- Ear infection
- Sore throat

When should I go to an URGENT CARE CENTER?

If you need care soon, usually within 24 hours or as soon as possible, call your doctor. If your doctor is not available, call your plan's Nurse Advice Line and they will guide you on what to do next. If you cannot call, go to the nearest urgent care center.

When should I go to the EMERGENCY ROOM?

If you need care right away because you reasonably believe your health is in serious danger go to the nearest emergency room or call 9-1-1. Emergency rooms treat illnesses or injuries that are life threatening or may cause serious damage if not treated right away. For example:

- Broken bones
- Chest pain
- Severe burns and cuts
- Trouble breathing

Avoid the long lines at the emergency room and urgent care center! If you are enrolled in Medi-Cal or a Covered California plan, find help by calling your plan's Nurse Advice Line.
